Foreign Exchange SOLD VANILLA CALL OPTION

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Transactions involve various risks including movements in currency rates and interest rates. You can make losses and that is a risk you take. If you do not understand the risks or are not willing to accept the risks or make losses, you should not enter into these transactions with us.

The information set out in this document is general in nature and does not and is not intended to take into account your particular needs, objectives or financial situation. By providing it, St.George does not intend to provide financial advice or any financial recommendations. You should read this Product Disclosure Document carefully and consider whether this product is appropriate to your particular needs, objectives and financial situations. You may also seek independent expert advice before making a decision about whether or not this product is suitable for you.

PRODUCT DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

This PDS for Sold Vanilla Call Option was prepared on 1st March 2010. However it is intended for use only for the financial products provided after the effective date shown on the cover.

Risk Overview

A Foreign Exchange Sold Vanilla Call Option (FX Sold Vanilla Call Option) is a product in which you face unlimited losses depending on movements in the currency pair. In return for accepting this risk, St.George will pay you a non-refundable option premium.

Purpose

What is an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option used for?

An FX Sold Vanilla Call Option is a product used to generate income in the form of a once off premium. You earn the premium by selling an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option to St.George.

St.George will only enter into an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option where you have an underlying corresponding foreign currency exposure.

Suitability

Do I have sufficient knowledge about these products?

An FX Sold Vanilla Call Option is an income-generating product. It is not designed to provide protection against movements in the relevant currency.

If St.George chooses not to exercise the option there will be no exchange of currencies. As such, selling an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option is not suitable where you have a need to exchange a currency pair at a known rate at a particular date in the future.

This product will only be suitable if you have a good understanding of foreign exchange markets and the way that option products work. In particular, you need to understand how you will be impacted financially if St.George exercises the option, and that St.George will have no regard to your position when deciding whether or not to exercise the option.

If you are not confident about your understanding of these things, this product may not be suitable for you and we strongly suggest you seek independent advice before making a decision about this product.

Currency Quoting Conventions

The foreign exchange market quotes foreign exchange rates by quoting a base currency first (“base currency”) and then a terms currency (“terms currency”). For example, it is market practice that when an exchange rate for Australian dollars with US dollars is quoted, Australian dollars is the base currency and US dollars is the terms currency.

The quoted rate means 1 dollar in the base currency can be exchanged for an amount (the rate) of the terms currency, e.g. an AUD/USD spot rate of 0.7000 means that 1 AUD can be exchanged for 0.7000 USD.

An FX Sold Vanilla Call Option can be set to buy either the base currency or the terms currency, which means you will be selling the contra currency as described in our Foreign Exchange Sold Vanilla Put Option Product Disclosure Statement

Description

What does an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option do? / What am I selling?

An FX Sold Vanilla Call Option is an agreement between the seller (you) and the buyer (St.George) of the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option. St.George will pay you a premium for selling an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option. By selling an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option, you grant St.George the right but not the obligation to buy an agreed amount of one currency with another nominated currency at an agreed price (the strike price). St.George will exercise the option if the market foreign exchange rate for the currency pair is less favourable to us than the strike price.

The two currencies in an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option are referred to as the “currency pair”.

European-style only

FX Sold Vanilla Call Options are European-style options. This means that the option can only be exercised by St.George on the expiry date.

What variables can I change?

The strike price, the expiry date, the currency pair and amount may be nominated by you and will be tailored and fixed from the outset. The currency pair nominated by you must be acceptable to St.George – further details of which are available on request.

What do I receive?

In return for selling an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option, you receive from St.George an option premium. We will calculate the premium that St.George is prepared to pay for each FX Sold Vanilla Call Option on a transaction-by-transaction basis.

What important factors affect the premium at any point of time?

To calculate the premium payable, St.George takes into account several factors, which may include:

- The strike price;
- The expiry date;
- Current market exchange rates;
- Volatility of the currency pair at that time; and
- Prevailing interest rates of the countries whose currency is being exchanged.

When do I receive this premium?

You will be advised of the premium payable to you before entering into an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option. The premium can be paid to you in either Australian dollars or in one of the currencies in the currency pair. Premiums are generally payable within two business days of entering into the transaction.

Are there any St.George credit requirements prior to dealing?

Before entering into an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option, St.George will need to assess your financial position to determine whether or not your situation satisfies our normal credit requirements. St.George will advise you of the outcome of its review as soon as possible.

If your application is successful, you will be required to sign St.George’s standard finance documentation. That documentation will set out the terms of the credit approval and other matters relevant to your application.

Our assessment of your financial position is made only to determine your credit worthiness. By doing this, we are not making any assessment of the suitability of this product for you.

Cost of Product

You do not pay St.George any fees or charges when you sell an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option to St.George. However, you should be fully aware of, and comfortable with, the potential financial costs to you if the option is exercised. General details of the potential costs are set out in this document but you should explore in full the costs that might be borne by you based on the particular terms of the option that you are considering selling.

St.George will benefit from the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option by incorporating a margin into the strike price. The margin is the difference between the wholesale exchange rate we are able to obtain and the exchange rate offered to you. The margin may be described as an indirect cost.

Advantages/Benefits

- FX Sold Vanilla Call Options provide up-front premium income.
- FX Sold Vanilla Call Options are flexible in that the strike price, the expiry date and amount can be tailored to suit your needs.
- FX Sold Vanilla Call Options can be terminated before their expiry date, giving you the ability to eliminate your exposure if desired. However, there is likely to be a cost to you in doing so (see section on Early Termination).
- The premium to be received is known at the time the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option is entered into.
- Unless St.George exercises your FX Sold Vanilla Call Option, there is no commitment or obligation to exchange currencies.

Disadvantages/Risks

- If St.George exercises the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option, you are obligated to deliver your currency to St.George at the strike price.
- If the option is exercised and you do not have the currency you are required to deliver, you will need to purchase it in order to meet your obligations under the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option. As the exchange rate at which you purchase that currency will be less favourable than the strike price of the option, this will result in a loss to you. This loss is potentially unlimited.
- An FX Sold Vanilla Call Option is not designed to provide protection against a movement in the relevant currency. The benefit of the product is limited to the premium received.
- You may terminate the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option early, however early termination may result in you incurring costs. Those costs may be higher than the premium you received for the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option.
- There is no cooling off period. Once you have sold an option, you are bound by its terms.
- St.George, as the counterparty to a CF (Importer), must fulfill its contractual obligations to you in the manner set out in the relevant contract. If St.George is unable to fulfill those obligations, you will be exposed to market fluctuations as if you had not entered into a CF (Importer). However, as an Australian Authorised Deposit-Taking Institution, we are subject to prudential regulation which is intended to reduce the likelihood of St.George not being able to fulfill its contractual obligations.

Settlement

When could St.George exercise my Sold Call Option?

For FX Sold Vanilla Call Options, there are two possible scenarios on the expiry date:

1. If the currency pair exchange rate is less favourable to us than the strike price, St.George will exercise your FX Sold Vanilla Call Option. You will then be obligated to exchange your currency into the other nominated currency at the strike price two business days after the expiry date; or
2. If the currency pair exchange rate is more favourable to us than the strike price, St.George will allow the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option to lapse. That is because the current market rate of exchange for the currency pair would provide St.George with a better rate for exchanging its currency.

What happens when an option is exercised?

St.George will inform you of its exercise intentions on the day of expiry.

If St.George exercises the option, settlement will occur on the value date being two business days after the expiry date.

On the settlement date, you will be required to deliver your currency to St.George. Foreign currency to be delivered to St.George can be provided by either telegraphic transfer or from a foreign currency account or deposit. Australian dollars must be provided in clear funds.

On receipt of the funds, St.George will in turn satisfy its obligations by depositing amounts owing to you into a St.George bank account (in your name) denominated in the relevant currency. Alternative arrangements can be made with St.George's prior approval.

Early Termination

Can I terminate the Option prior to expiry?

You may ask us to terminate the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option at any time up to the expiry date.

St.George will then provide you with a quote for canceling the option.

What will be the value of the option on early termination?

St.George's quote will incorporate the same variables (being the strike price, currency pair exchange rate, amount, volatility, interest rates and expiry date) used when pricing the original option, but adjusted for prevailing market rates over the remaining term of the option.

In addition, it will generally be necessary to take into account the cost of reversing or offsetting your original transaction.

George has regard to the current market rates that would apply to any such offsetting transaction. It should be noted that the amount payable by you upon termination would not be the same as the amount of the original premium paid to you by St.George.

What happens if I accept?

If the amount quoted is acceptable, the option will be cancelled on payment of the quoted amount.

Documentation

You will be required to sign a dealing agreement with St.George. There are two types of agreements that are commonly used to document foreign exchange transactions:

- A facility agreement with St.George which incorporates either St.George's Standard Terms for Financial Markets Transactions or St.George's General Standard Terms (of which this product disclosure statement forms part); or An International Swaps and Derivatives Association Master Dealing Agreement (ISDA).

We will advise you which of these we will require, based on what is most suitable for you.

Each of the above documents governs the contractual relationship between you and us in relation to the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option. The terms of that document may also set out the terms and conditions that apply to other transactions that we enter into with you.

In particular, it documents the situations where those transactions can be terminated and the way the amount payable following termination is calculated. A copy of the agreement is available on request and we strongly recommend that you fully consider its terms prior to entering into any transaction. You should obtain independent advice if you do not understand any aspect of the document.

Confirmation

Shortly after entering into an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option, St.George will send you a confirmation outlining the commercial terms of the transaction. This confirmation will need to be signed by you and returned to St.George.

Warning

It is extremely important that you check the confirmation to make sure that it accurately records the terms of the transaction. In the case of a discrepancy, you will need to raise the matter with your St.George contact as a matter of urgency.

Example

The examples below are indicative only and use rates and figures selected by us to demonstrate how the product works. In order to assess the merits of any particular option, you would need to use the actual rates and figures quoted to you at the relevant time.

Scenario

Assume you are an Australian based importer due to pay USD 100,000 in 3 months for goods purchased overseas. At that time, you will need to convert your Australian dollars (AUD) into United States dollars (USD). Also assume the current AUD/USD exchange rate is 0.5000.

If I do nothing, what exchange rate risks do I face?

If you did nothing, the amount of AUD you will pay in 3 months for your underlying exposure will depend on the exchange rate at that particular time.

If the AUD goes up, the USD will become less valuable and as a consequence, you will require less AUD to pay for the USD. Assume in this example that the AUD rises to 0.5200, then you will pay:

$$\text{AUD } 192,307.69 \quad (\text{i.e. } \text{USD } 100,000 / 0.5200)$$

If the AUD goes down, the opposite occurs and you will need to pay more AUD. If we assume the AUD falls to 0.4800 then you will pay:

$$\text{AUD } 208,333.33 \quad (\text{i.e. } \text{USD } 100,000 / 0.4800)$$

How will the AUD FX Sold Vanilla Call Option change this?

Assume you enter into an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option with an agreed strike price of 0.4998 and receive a premium of AUD 6,000. Also assume that this premium is set aside and not used to buffer or offset any of your foreign exchange obligations.

If the AUD goes down (for example to 0.4800), St.George would allow your option to lapse and at expiry you would convert your AUD into USD 100,0000 at the prevailing market exchange rate and pay:

AUD 208,333.33 (i.e. USD 100,000 / 0.4800)

This leaves you in exactly the same position as you would have been if you had not entered into the option transaction. The FX Sold Vanilla Call Option does not protect you against movements in the AUD and you continue to have an unlimited risk in respect of your underlying exposure when the AUD weakens.

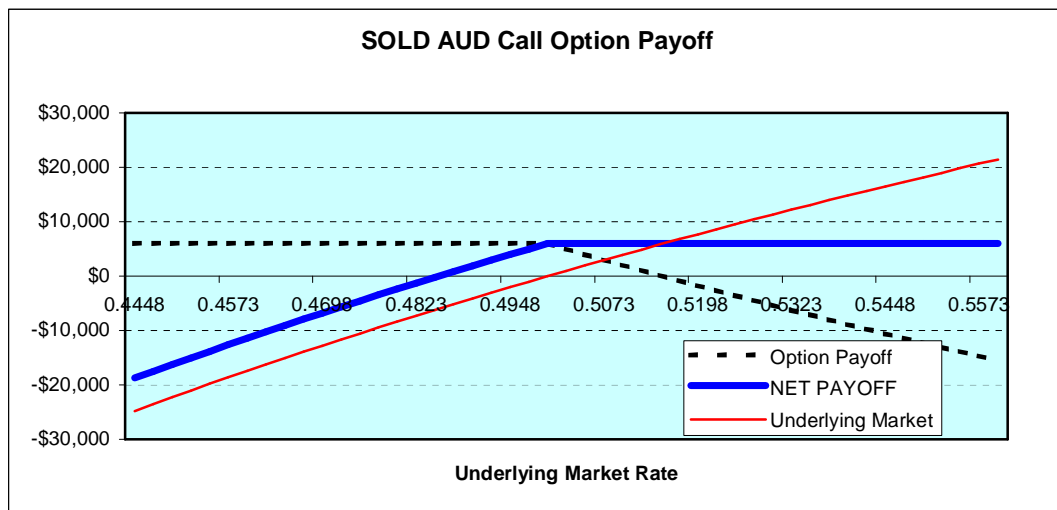

If, however the AUD goes up, (for example to 0.5200), St.George would exercise the option and you would be required to pay:

AUD 200,080.03 (i.e. USD 100,000 / 0.4998)

Your obligation to exchange at the strike price means that you forfeit the opportunity to participate in the benefits of a stronger currency.

In the graph below, this is shown as a horizontal line to the right of the strike price and highlights the additional risk associated with selling call options. In effect, you have lost the benefits of a stronger AUD for the receipt of an up-front premium. At the expiry date, you will be worse off if the prevailing exchange rate is greater than the strike price.

The graph below charts your AUD your profit/loss at expiry for various prevailing rates if you did not enter into an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option (Payment Without Option), and your AUD payment obligation at expiry if you over-laid an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option (Payment With Option) without the premium benefit.

What benefit does the premium provide?

If however you were to use the option premium received to help offset your foreign exchange obligations, a protective buffer against losses is created. This protection is restricted to the amount of premium received for the FX Sold Vanilla Call Option and as such provides limited benefit.

In the example, if the AUD traded to 0.4800, adjusted for the option premium received, your overall payment would be:

AUD 202,333.33 (i.e. AUD 208,333.33 - AUD 6,000)

which equates to an effective exchange rate of:

0.4942 (i.e. USD 100,000 / AUD 202,333.33)

If the AUD trades up to 0.5200, St.George would exercise your option at the 0.4998 strike price and your overall payment would be:

AUD 194,080.03 (i.e. AUD 200,080.03 - AUD 6,000)

which equates to an effective exchange rate of:

$$0.5153 \quad (\text{i.e. USD } 100,000 / \text{AUD } 194,080.03)$$

It is important to reiterate that the option premium only mitigates a portion of the losses and as such the buffer provides a limited benefit.

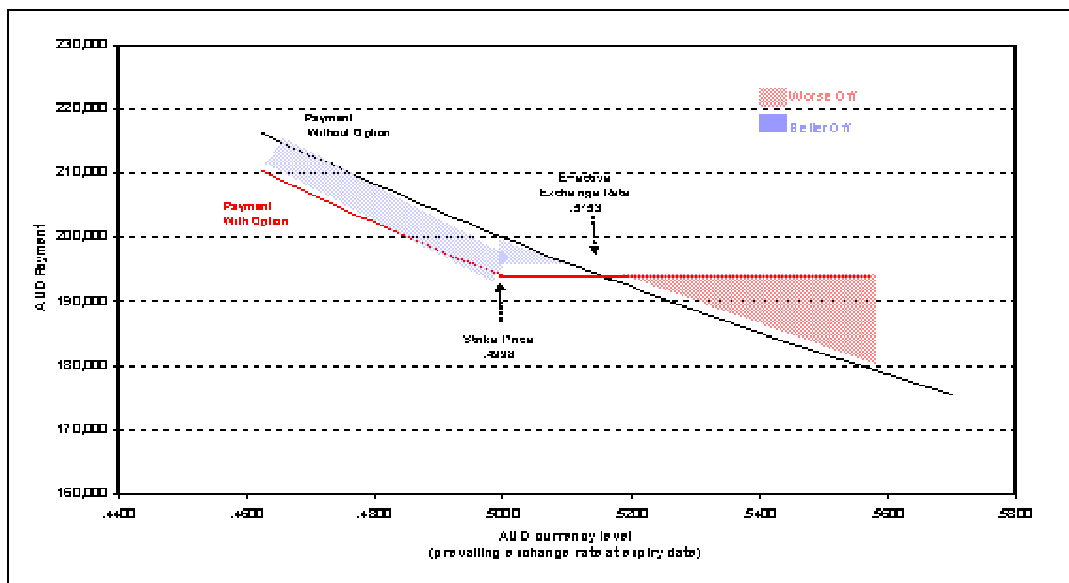

Furthermore, the effective exchange rate is not the rate that the currencies will actually be exchanged at at maturity. Rather, the effective rate is the prevailing exchange rate adjusted to reflect the amount of premium received.

At what exchange rate(s) will the buffer be completely eroded?

The benefit derived from the AUD 6,000 premium is completely eroded if the AUD trades either below 0.4854 or above 0.5153. Beyond this range:

- you face unlimited losses if the AUD continues to weaken; or
- an unlimited opportunity cost if the AUD continues to strengthen.

The graph below charts your AUD payment obligation at expiry date for various prevailing rates if you did not enter into an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option (Payment Without Option), and your AUD payment obligation at expiry date if you over-laid an FX Sold Vanilla Call Option (Payment With Option) and included the premium benefit.

Code of Banking Practice compliance

If you are an individual or a small business, the relevant provisions of the Code of Banking Practice will apply to this product.

This PDS contains the general descriptive information we are required to make available to customers and potential customers under the Code of Banking Practice and it is advisable that you inform us promptly when you are in financial difficulty
